

The Children's Commissioner to speak at PSHE Association Annual Conference in London and Leeds

We are delighted to announce that the new Children's Commissioner for England, Anne Longfield OBE, has agreed to deliver a keynote speech at our Annual Conferences in London (June 25th) and Leeds (July 2nd). This year's conference will focus on safeguarding pupils through PSHE education.

Anne Longfield has been a very strong advocate for PSHE education and statutory status for the subject since she became Children's Commissioner back in March, listing it as one her six key post-election priorities for the new government. Conference delegates will therefore value hearing her speak about the subject's importance and its contribution to keeping children and young people safe.

The London conference has now sold out* but we still have 10 places left in Leeds on July 2nd. We'd strongly advise booking as soon as possible to guarantee your place. Both events will offer a great choice of practical workshops and keynotes on the national perspective.

Find out more and book your place now at our Leeds conference, 2nd July 2015

*If you are unable to attend in Leeds, you can email us to be added to the waiting list for the conference in London.